“Mind War”

Sunday, April 24th - Tuesday, April 26th

Upon arriving at Babylon 5, Jason Ironheart and his friend separate. While Jason goes looking for quarters, his friend goes into hiding in DownBelow.

Mind War.

Representatives from Universal Terraforming Corporation arrange a meeting with Catherine Sakai to offer her a survey job looking for a new source of Quantum 40. With jumpgate production 6 months behind, the world they have targeted, Sigma 957, is in Narn territory, so they invite G’Kar to their meeting.

Arriving on Babylon 5, Psi Cop Alfred Bester and Miss Kelsey make for Commander Sinclair’s office to brief him about Jason Ironheart.

Knowing that contacting Talia before her meeting with the Psi Cops will alert them to his presence, Jason waits until the meeting with Bester and Kelsey is finished.

At G’Kar’s request, Frazi class fighters are sent from Narn to provide assistance to Catherine Sakai when she arrives at Sigma 957.

Alerted by Security clearing a route to the docking bays, Bester and Kelsey set an ambush for Jason in the Zocalo.

After the attempt to kill Jason and Kelsey’s death, Bester reports to Commander Sinclair’s office where he is shown a recording of Jason’s transcendence.

Monday, April 25th

As the Narn fighter nears Sigma 957, they pick up Catherine’s mayday call.

Tuesday, April 26th

The Skydancer is escorted back to Babylon 5. Upon her arrival at the station, Catherine goes to find G'Kar.

Dr. Stephen Franklin sets up an illegal clinic in DownBelow to treat the lurkers that live there. He doesn't tell Lieutenant Commander Ivanova about it. The clinic acts as a front for a railroad set up by Ironheart's friend and fellow participant, to help telepaths escaping Psi Corps. Dr. Franklin begins processing the runaways and changing records without anyone from Med Lab knowing about it, because although he trusts his staff, Psi Corps have a knack for intimidation.

May

The budget for Babylon 5 is set. While military funding is increased, there are no extra resources made available to the Docker's Guild promised in negotiations from last year, in spite of Commander Sinclair's request.

The Talquith departs Narn for Babylon 5 carrying a G'Quan Eth for G'Kar to use in observing the Days of G'Quan.

“By Any Means Necessary”

After completing his deceleration routine, Kevin Vacit's damaged ship arrives at the world where the Vorlon experimental station is based. Detecting a power source, Vacit brings the ship down. Exploring the surface, he comes across powerful telepathic beings, the result of the Vorlon experiments to create the telepath gene. A while after finding more of these beings are scattered across the planet, the Vorlons destroy the outpost and the results of their research to stop it from falling into Shadow hands. The attack causes a nuclear winter. Vacit manages to save a few thousand beings from the Vorlon onslaught by combining his own telepathic skills with the telepathic powers of the beings. In response to the trace of the Vorlon consciousness that resided in his mind, the outpost's protective domes begin to grow, stripping his ship of metals to produce the necessary equipment and conditions for Vacit to survive. Exploring his surroundings, Vacit finds remains of different species from around the galaxy and surmises that the Nephilim, as he comes to call these beings, are the results of the experiments performed by the Vorlons to produce the telepath gene.

Elizar spies on a meeting between Kell and a Drakh, where Kell hands over DNA samples from the chrysalis stage mages ready for their full implants and from those apprentices ready to enter the chrysalis stage of their training. Unaware he is being used, Elizar makes contact with the Shadows' allies, gathering information which Kell secretly accesses to monitor the Shadows' activities.

The Earth Alliance learn about the creation of an anti-agapic by Jha'dur that guarantees the user immortality and secretly negotiates with her for the serum. They are unaware that a key component of the drug cannot be synthesized; it has to be extracted from another living being, meaning that a person has to die for another to achieve immortality. She leaves Sector 47 in Minbari space, making for Earth via Babylon 5 under the name Gila Lobos.

Agents for the Narn Regime learn about Jha'dur's discovery and Councillor Ha'Roc is dispatched from Narn aboard the liner Callisto to negotiate for it.

Delenn leaves the station on diplomatic business.

Wishing to know about Talia Winters' telepathic abilities, Kosh hires an associate of his, Abbut, a "Vicker," a cybernetically enhanced being nicknamed after VCRs of the 20th century, to scan and record her thoughts.

Ready to hire Talia Winters for his important business, Kosh arranges the clearances for her commission and makes a generous payment into her account.
